

A Trusted Source So You Can Work FromHome

Transitioning back into the workplace while managing your disability can be challenging. At NTI@Home, we provide the services to allow you to thrive during your transition.

Our work-at-home program provides individuals with disabilities the opportunity to work from home for leading industries, organizations and government agencies. For more than 25 years, NTI@Home has provided work-at-home jobs for individuals with disabilities as call center agents, customer service representatives, and IT help desk technicians.

To strengthen the program, NTI@Home has partnered with the Social Security Administration's Ticket to Work program to become one of the largest and trusted employment networks, while providing verified disability mentoring, training, and placement services.

Mentoring Toward Your Success

Once you register for the NTI@Home program, a Job Coach is assigned to you to guide you through the process right from your initial phone call through your first 90-days of employment.

NTI@Home's Job Coach program has been nationally recognized for serving more than 2,000 people with disabilities and was officially inducted into the Susan M. Daniels Disability Mentoring Hall of Fame in Washington, DC.

"I have worked from home since 2004 with NTI@Home. Being in a wheelchair meant my job options were limited, but now I make an income. My family sees that a physical disability doesn't mean you have to let your mind go to waste. They're proud of me and I love that. Thank you, NTI!"

Training Toward Transition

How do you prepare for your first day of work? NTI@Home has online and instructor-led courses to help meet the technical and professional needs of working remotely. Classes provide training on customer service, problem solving, and maintaining your home office through hands-on activities, presentations, discussion, and knowledge-sharing. Candidates are given the knowledge, skills, and ability to excel at their new position.
